Sub: Application for Junior Policy Analysts – Education.

Dear Hiring Committee,

I am writing to express my strong interest in the Junior Policy Analysts – Education position at the OECD. With a background in economics and policy analysis, I am eager to contribute my quantitative research, data analysis, and drafting skills to support education policy work.

As reflected in my resume, I have built experience in applied research, data collection, and policy-focused analysis through my work at Queen's University, the Institute for International Economic Studies, and in OECD consulting. I am particularly drawn to the opportunity to turn evidence into clear conclusions for policy audiences and to contribute to international analytical work on education.

As a prospective employee, I can immediately bring the following strengths to your team:

- Strong analytical skills: As a Research Assistant, I analyzed datasets and reviewed academic literature for major projects in politics and education. I managed data using SQL and Excel, collected information through Python-based web scraping from diverse online sources, and synthesized both quantitative evidence and qualitative research into concise summary reports. By working efficiently under time constraints, I helped shorten project timelines by two months when rapid delivery was required.
- Ability to work independently and collaboratively: In my role as a Data Analyst at the Institute for International Economic Studies, I independently analyzed data from 15,000 Swedish establishments using advanced statistical methods to strengthen research quality. At the same time, I worked closely with research teams to ensure data accuracy and consistency through careful collection and cleaning processes. By developing efficient solutions to data management challenges, I contributed to more reliable analyses, stronger insights, and improved project outcomes.

While my resume provides an overview of my background, I would welcome the opportunity to discuss in greater detail how my experience and motivation can support OECD education research goals. I would be honored to contribute to the innovative work being carried out by the Directorate for Education and Skills.

Thank you for your time and consideration. I look forward to the possibility of speaking with you further about this opportunity.

Sincerely,

Jay Lee
