Sub: Application for Junior Advisor.

Dear Hiring Committee,

I am writing to express my strong interest in the Junior Advisor position at the OECD. With OECD consulting experience, strong analytical training, and a background in economics and data analysis, I am eager to contribute to evidence-based work that supports the Office of the Secretary-General.

As reflected in my resume, I have developed experience in cross-country analysis, research, and translating complex findings into clear, policy-relevant narratives. I would welcome the opportunity to apply my research, data analysis, and communication skills in a role focused on briefings, corporate messaging, and coordination across teams.

As a prospective employee, I can immediately bring the following strengths to your team:

- Strong analytical skills: As a consultant at the OECD, I worked on cross-country health indicator analysis and other research tasks that required collecting, validating, and interpreting data with care. My economics background and statistical training have helped me approach policy questions with a quantitative and analytical mindset, and I am comfortable turning complex information into concise summaries.
- Ability to work independently and collaboratively: In research and analyst roles, I have worked closely with teams to produce clear outputs under tight timelines. I value collaboration across functions, and I am comfortable adapting my work to support different audiences and priorities while maintaining accuracy and consistency.

While my resume provides an overview of my background, I would welcome the opportunity to discuss how my experience can support the OECD's work and the priorities of the Office of the Secretary-General. I would be honored to contribute to the Organisation's evidence-based policy work and collaborative environment.

Thank you for your time and consideration. I look forward to the possibility of speaking with you further about this opportunity.

Sincerely,

Jay Lee
